A betting app

Hello! I recently installed a betting app on my Android device using an installation file, and I’m wondering what the best approach is for future updates. Should I uninstall the old version before installing the new one, or can I just install the update over the existing app? I’d prefer to avoid having to re-enter my login credentials or reconfigure my preferred odds display format every single time. I’d appreciate any advice from those who have been using such apps regularly for a while.

There’s definitely no need to delete the old version before updating; otherwise, you’d have to reconfigure your filters and log back into your profile. I always just check for the latest 1x release and install the new apk right over the current one. All your login details and betting history remain intact. It’s great that the developers are constantly fine-tuning stability - the sports betting lines load quickly, and bonus offers are always displayed correctly.
